CRISTY'S PICKS OF THE MONTH

WHAT IS CRISTY CRAVING THIS MONTH?

After 40 weeks and 3 days, I'm now a proud mommy of two beautiful girls! And to celebrate—Mama needs a cocktail. Having La Cocina Cocteleria open while I was with child gave me something to look forward to (other than my precious baby), and I can finally taste what everyone has been raving about! The first cocktail on my agenda? The LeeEterally Lucy Lopez. Why? Because she's literally a vibe, we're both mommies and I LOVE watermelon soda. I'll be making my way, responsibly, of course, through the whole list, but for those who aren't like me that have yet to taste the cocktail menu, que estas esperando?! Or for non-speakers, what are you waiting for?!

KEEPING UP WITH KAPTAIN KUSH

Knaus Berry Farm is officially OPEN! Locals should know, but for those out-of-towners, this is a MUST DO Miami experience. People will be heading down in hungry herds to the lower part of Dade County and get some cinnamon rolls and a strawberry milkshake at Knaus Berry Farm. Be warned, there is always a wait unless you tell them your friends with Kaptain Kush; it's at least worth a shot!

But getting to the importance of this local tradition, Knaus Berry Farm was founded in 1956 as a roadside stand, where Ray and Russell Knaus sold berries. The brothers soon expanded their inventory to include pies, a variety of freshly baked bread and other baked goods when a fruit broker told Ray's wife, Barbara, that her cookies were "good enough to sell". Today the farm is still run by Ray and Barbara's children and their families and Knaus Berry Farm has expanded to sell fruit shakes, local vegetables and coffee. It also offers U-pick strawberries and tomatoes later in the season.

The vibe is still very much the same as it was in the 1960s, Blocher says. "We want Knaus Berry Farm to be Knaus Berry Farm, always."

Peace, Love, and KUSH,
KK

LOCAL VENDOR SPOTLIGHT TIO COLO ICE CREAM SANDWICHES

This family-owned business focuses solely on traditional Cuban ice cream sandwiches. Locally made in Hialeah with flavors such as mamey, guava, and mantecado. These are the Cuban version of an ice cream sammies, their ice cream is sandwiched between two moist slices of panetela, sponge cake sprinkled with sugar for an added crunch. They're all made fresh daily and individually wrapped for grab-and-go convenience. Stephen's Delicatessen and La Cocina in Hialeah proudly serve Tio Colo Ice Cream, ask your server for available flavors.
